

THE COLONIST.

Vol. I. Price—One Cent. ST. JOHN'S, N. F., MONDAY, JUNE 28, 1886. $3.00 per Annum. No. 92.

By Telegraph.

HALIFAX, N. S., June 28.
Parnell declares the separation idea as ridiculous, and says that Gladstone's scheme fully protects the minority. Carnarvon vehemently favors Parnell's plan. The Irish will accept Gladstone's plan as final. Seventy seven Parnellites will be returned in Ireland without opposition. Cardinal Manning favors home rule, consistent with the integrity of the Empire and the sovereign Imperial Parliament.

There has been serious fighting between strikers and police in Chicago, several strikers have been killed.

There was a violent thunderstorm in Halifax yesterday.

Beaudry ex-Mayor of Montreal died on Saturday.

[SPECIAL TO THE COLONIST.]

LONDON, June 28.

This morning when the libel case, Field versus Labouchere, was going on, the Attorney General, on behalf of Mr. Labouchere, withdrew the plea of justification and expressed Mr. Labouchere's regret for publishing the article, and stated that he and Sir Henry James, Mr. Field's counsel, had agreed upon an amount that would be paid by Mr. Labouchere, in satisfaction of costs, and asked the judge to discharge the jury. The Attorney General, on behalf of Mr. Labouchere and Sir Henry James, counsel for Mr. Field, and the judge, all expressed in Court their gratification at the honorable settlement. For several days Mr. Labouchere's counsel has been wanting to have the case settled by his making an apology and retraction, and not paying anything for costs. This Mr. Field's counsel and himself absolutely refused to accept.

BONAVISTA, June 28.

Last Friday afternoon His Lordship, Bishop MacDonald, and Rev. Fathers Carolan and Veitch, visited Ragged Harbor, where the whole population turned out en masse to receive His Lordship; arches of evergreens spanning the road, profuse bunting and countless guns, but feebly voiced the people's enthusiasm. The Bishop was surprised and delighted at such a spontaneous manifestation of the fervent faith of the people, and having thanked them returned to Catalina where a sumptuous repast was waiting the Bishop and clergy, on the hospitable board of Thomas McCormack, Esq. After dinner the Bishop and clergy left for Bonavista, where Pastoral visitation closed at dawn yesterday, by His Lordship celebrating Mass, attended by Fathers Carolan and Lynch.

Captain Nelson reports that on the trip inward he saw the brig Dove, of Arrandale, 30 days from Bristol to Dalhousie, Bay Chaleur. She reports all well. The Captain reports squid plentiful on the Banks.

The steamer "Plover" arrived here from the northward yesterday afternoon. She reports no fish at all points but Exploits and Greenspond; at these places small boats get about one quintal daily. At Tilt Cove the ship met Mr. Bendel's steam launch from Battle Harbor, from whose crew she ascertained that there was fish at Baulo Harbor, and the "Plover" reports having met an Island vessel which came through the Straits of Belle Isle with a load of produce for Herring Neck, this latter vessel brings good reports of fish from the Newfoundland side of the Straits. NEED OF POLITICAL ORGANIZATION.

(To the Editor of the Colonist.)

SIR,—Having read your definition of true Liberalism, as well as your remarks on the probability of reviving a sound state of public opinion on political affairs in this Colony. It occurred to me that to attain the end desired, organization is necessary. The press may denounce, in the strongest terms, the wholesale fraud and imbecility of the present Government; individuals may pour forth torrents of just indignation at their want of consistency, but it is all thrown away unless there is a combined effort on the part of the people to rectify this state of things. The present set of incumbent obtained office by deceit and by disfranchising half the districts in the Island, and they mean to hold on to the loaves and fishes as long as possible, although they know there is not a constituency in the country would re-elect one of them now. They care nothing for the rights and liberties of an outraged people, they are dead to all sense of honesty and common decency, everything, in fact, except self-interest, place and pay. Therefore I would suggest the propriety of forming a Liberal Association, with branches in every district, embracing all denominations interested in the advancement of our common country. Such a combination would be a check on the time-serving and place-hunting politicians who, under the present system, appoint themselves, then appoint a committee to procure their election. Once elected they are independent of the constituency they pretend to represent and never think of giving an account of their acts in the Assembly. A reformation of this kind may take some time, but I believe it would be successful if taken in hand by men like Messrs. Bond and Emerson, who seem the most independent members of the present House of Assembly.

Yours, &c.,

ONE OF THE PEOPLE.

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY AT VILLA NOVA.

(From our Topsail Correspondent.)

On Thursday last, the first Corpus Christi procession that ever took place in the Topsail District, was held at St. Thomas's Home, Villa Nova. Though the time for the ceremony was set down at 4.30, yet from an early hour in the afternoon, the good people from the extreme ends of the parish—from St. Ann's to Lance Cove, came in numbers to the beautiful grounds surrounding Villa Nova. One would hardly recognize the site of the old hotel, in the magnificent group of buildings that now stand in its stead. The beautiful chapel, the large, airy school-rooms, the spacious dormitories, refectory, play-halls &c. are a standing monument of the magnanimity and munificence of his Lordship Dr. Power—who is, patron of the Institution and one of its greatest and most constant benefactors—to the zeal and executive ability of Father Morris, its guardian, and to the faith and charity of the good people of all denominations who assisted in the noble work of raising a home for the orphan boys of Newfoundland. At 4.30 sharp, the procession, headed by a crucifix, emerged from the little Chapel then followed by between sixty and seventy of the boys belonging to the home, looking clean, neat and well-cared for, carrying appropriate banners; next in order came the little girls from Kelligrews, Topsail and Villa Nova schools, tastily dressed in white and carrying banners and flowers; then the altar boys from Kelligrews and Topsail, then a choir of orphan boys carrying tapers and chanting the litanies, then his Lordship bearing the Sacred Host, supported by Father Morris, under a canopy carried by four of the principal residents of the parish, followed by a large concourse of people from the surrounding localities and the city. As it moved slowly, the choir chanting, through the smiling meadows, the sylvan ambulatories and open glades, to the place of Benediction, it presented a picturesqueness—a solemnity unsurpassed, unrivalled outside of sunny Italy. The first altar was erected on an eminence, under the friendly shade of a gigantic silver birch, whose tapering limbs—nature's Corinthian pillars—and profuse foliage stood out in bold relief from the calm scene of the azure vaults," intercepting the sun's rays from the processionists, and lending a natural beauty to the scene, that any art would unequal. The Sanctuary was in a large semi-circle alcove, formed by choice evergreens, decorated with a profusion of seasonable flowers and ferns, gathered by the orphan boys, while a large open meadow formed a natural auditorium. Here, then, while the prayers of the pious and simple worshippers, blending with the plaintive Tantum Ergo of the orphans and the music of the feathered warblers, mingled with the incense ascending to Heaven the assembled people took part in one of the greatest mysteries, dear to the Catholic heart—the Benediction of the Most Holy Sacrament. It was a magnificent sight, and must have been most impressive to those present, even those who couldn't, understand the plenitude of faith that prompted the devotion. The Benediction being over, the procession, proceeded by cross-bearer and acolytes, enlivened by the Litanies of the orphans and the music of the birds, wound its way slowly over a gently sloping meadow into a shady glen where the second altar was set up. Here one would suppose, from the beauty of the place, that nature had been preparing to do homage to "Nature's God." The glen, shut in on three sides by dense and variegated foliage, forming a "living temple," ceiled by the brilliant, unsullied dome of Heaven, carpeted by nature's choicest, softest and most fragrant mosses, the air redolent with the perfume of the opening buds and flowers, and alive with the hosannas of nature's songsters. Oh! it was a fitting and appropriate temple in which to do homage to the Most High. After the Benediction the procession retraced its way over the little hill side, past the silver birches, through the sylvan shades and smiling meadows, back to the little chapel. Here was held the third Benediction, and though the altar and sanctuary were tastily decorated, yet the unceiled and unfinished interior, contrasted strongly with and lacked the beauty of the natural temples. But Father Morris, who has great faith in Him who has so abundantly blessed his labors heretofore, and in the generosity and goodness of his numerous benefactors, assured your correspondent, that before very long, the little chapel will be thoroughly completed. After the Benediction was over, His Lordship in his usual grand and impressive manner, addressed the assembled people from the chapel steps. In the course of his remarks he paid a well-merited compliment to the zeal and indomitable energy of Father Morris in the cause of his little orphans, and to the kindness and goodness of the benefactors of the institution, he also gave a glowing account of a kindred institution, that he had visited on his late journey, coming through New York. The people hung with rapture on every word that fell from his lips, and appeared to be sorry when he had finished speaking. To us people who are unaccustomed to the pomp and grandeur of similar processions in the city, it was an occasion most impressive, the effects of which were most salutary and never to be forgotten.

HOW LITTLE OLGA GETS LOST.

'Oh! please, please don't bite me! I don't mean any harm. I am only lost, and fell down here!' A great sob. 'I am Olga Ventnor, and I want to go home—oh! I want to go home!'

She breaks down in a great passion of sobs. The impish-looking child before her breaks into a discordant, jeering laugh.

'She wants to go home! Oh, she wants to go home! Oh! please somebody come and take this young lady home! Look at her! Ain't she putty with her old white dress, and muddy shoes, and shiny beads. Say, you! give me them beads this very minute, or I'll snatch em off your neck.'

With rapid, trembling fingers, the child unfastens the necklace, and holds it out to her tormentor.

'What business have you, you stuck-up little peacock?' continues the imp, wrenching, savagely, the costly trinkets asunder, 'with hair down to your waist, yellow hair too, the color of your beads, and all in nasty ringlets! Oh, lordy! we think ourselves handsome, don't we! And embroidery and lace on our frocks, and pink, and blue, and white buttoned boots, with ribbon bows! I've seen you. And a French servant gal to wait upon us, in a white cap and apron! And a kerridge to ride in! And white feathers in our hats, and kid gloves, and silk stocken's! We're a great lady, we are, till we get lost in the woods, and then we can't do nothin' but sit down and blubber like a great calf! Why, you little devil!' she takes a step nearer, and her tone and look grow forcious, 'do you know that I hate you, that I would like to tramp on you, that I spit at you!' which she does, 'that I would like to pull out every one of them lopy curls by the roots! And I'll do it, too, before I let you go!'

The child is deadly white, deadly still, with fear. She does not speak nor move, cry out or turn to run—some terrible fascination holds her there breathless and spell-bound.

'What business have you,' cries the creature, with ever-increasing forcocity, 'with curls, and silk dresses, and gold beads, and servants, and kerridges, while your betters are tramping about barefoot, and beat and abused, and starved? You ain't no better nor me! You ain't so good, for you're a coward, and a cry-baby, and a little fool. And I'm going to hev them curls! And if you screech I'll kill you. I will! I hate you—I've hated you ever since I sor you first.'

She darts a step nearer. Olga recoils a step backward. Still she makes no outcry, no attempt to run. The fascination of intense terror holds her fast.

'I know you, and I know all about you,' goes on the goblin. 'I know your cousin, Frank Livingston; he comes to our house—he gives presents to Lora and Liz Sleaford. He's sweet on Lora, he is. She wears long curls, Lor' bless you, too! Like tar ropes they are, over her shoulders. I'm Sleaford's Joanna; if I don't kill you, you'll kill me next time, won't you? And I hate you because you're a young lady, with kerridges, and servants, and notin' to do, and long yellow ringlets down your start-up back.'

The ringlets seem to be the one unforgiven sin; she glares at them vengefully as she speaks.

'I'm going to pull them out. I never thought I'd hev the chance. There ain't nobody here to help or come if you yell. I don't care if they beat me to death for it, or hang me—I'll pull them out!'

She springs upon her victim with the leap of a wild-cat, and buries her claw-like fingers in the plate gold of the clustering hair. There is no mistaking her meaning—she fully intends it; her fierce eyes blaze with a baleful fire, and now, indeed, Olga finds her voice, and it rings 'out shrill, pealing, agonized.

'Papa! papa! Oh, papa!'

'Hi!' answers a sharp voice. Then a sharper whistle cut the air. 'Hi! Who's that? Call again.'

'Papa! papa! papa!'

There is a crashing among the trees, and not a second too soon. With a violent push and an oath—this diabolical little Barefoot flings her victim from her, and leaps away into the darkness with the fleetness of a fawn.

CHAPTER V.
SLEAFORD'S.

It is not papa who comes rushing to the rescue, but it is a man who stoops and picks her up—a young man with a gipsy face, a gun over his shoulder, and two or three yelping dogs at his heels. 'What the dickens is the row?' he asks, 'Hold up little 'un. Good G—! she's dead!'

It looks like it. She lies across his arm, a limp and inert little form all white drapery, blonde curls, and pale, still face. The moon is rising now, the big white shield of the July night, and he takes off the crushed Leghorn hat the better to behold his prize.

'By thunder!' he exclaims aloud, it's the little Ventnor. The little great lady, the little heiress. Now, then, here's a go, and no mistake.

He stands at a loss, utterly surprised. She has been as a small Sultana in the eyes of all Brightbrook; everyone knows her; and to find her like this, dead to all seeming, murdered, it may be, appals him.

'She wasn't dead a minute ago; she was screeching for her papa like a good 'un. Perhaps she ain't dead yet. Maybe she's fainted or that, frightened at something. Don't seem to be anybody here to frighten her nuther. Wonder what's gone wrong with the French ma'am'selle? Well, I'll tote her to the house, anyhow; if she's alive at all, the gals'll fetch her round.'

He swings her round as he might a kitten over his shoulder. He is a long-limbed, brown-skinned young fellow of twenty, whistles to his dogs and starts over the star-lit fields at a swinging pace. All the way he whistles, all the way his keen black eyes keep a bright look-out for any one that may be in hiding. No one seems to be for he reaches his destination, a solitary red farm house standing among some arid-looking meadows. A field of corn at one side looks, in the shine of the moon, like a goblin play-ground, but the house itself seems cheery enough. Many lights twinkle along its low front, and the lively strains of a fiddle greet him as he opens the door.

The interior is a remarkable one enough. The room is long and low, the ceiling quite black with smoke, as are also the walls; the broad floor a trifle blacker, if possible, than either; the furniture, some yellow wooden chairs, two deal tables, a wooden sofa, and a cupboard well-stocked with coarse blue delf. It is, in fact, a farm-house kitchen, and in the wide fire place, despite the warmth of the night, a fire is burning. Over it hangs a large pot, in which the family supper is simmering and sending forth savoury odours.

The occupants of the room are four. On one of the tables is perched a youth of eighteen, black-eyed, black-haired, swarthy skinned, playing the Virginia reel with Vigour and skill.

Two girls, young women, as far as size and development make women, though evidently not more than sixteen, are dancing with might and main, their hands on their sides, their heads well up, their cheeks flushed crimson, their black eyes alight, their black hair unbound—two wild young Bacchantes.

The one spectator of the reel sits crouched in the chimney corner, her knees drawn up, her elbows on them, her chin in her palms—a singularly witch-like attitude, barefooted, shock-headed, with gleaming, derisive dark eyes.

The door is flung wide, and enters the young man of the woods with his burden, his gun, and his dogs. The reel comes to a sudden stop, and six big black eyes stare in wild wonder at this unexpected sight.

'Why, what is it?' one of the girls cries—'a dead child, Dan? What for the Lord's sake have you got there?'

'Ah! what?' says Dan. 'Here, take her, and see if she's living or dead. I can tell you who she is, fast enough, or who she was, rather, for she looks as dead as door nail now, blessed if she don't. Here, fetch her to if you can, you, Lora; it will be worth while, let me tell you.'

He lays the limp child in the arms of one of the girls. The firelight falls upon the waxen face as they crowd around her. Only the crouching figure in the ingle nook stirs not. There is a simultaneous outcry of recognition and dismay.

'It's little Missey Ventnor!'
'It's the kernal's little gal!'
'It's Frank Livingston's cousin!'

CORPUS CHRISTI.

ANNUAL PROCESSION OF THE BLESSED SACRAMENT.

Yesterday being the Sunday within the octave of Corpus Christi, the Feast was celebrated with the solemnity and splendor which have been observed at the Roman Catholic Cathedral, by His Lordship Dr. Power. He preached, with his wonted eloquence, on the Blessed Sacrament, in the morning, at three masses, making the doctrine of the Catholic Church, on this great mystery, clear to the understanding of the large concourse of people who were present. The weather in the morning was fine; but in the afternoon became overcast and the rain began to fall in gentle showers, making the fond mothers to feel sorely disappointed lest their little ones, whom they had gaily dressed, could not take part in the procession in honor of the Blessed Sacrament. Fears were entertained that the procession would have to be confined to the inside of the Cathedral, but though the weather continued cold, all through the afternoon no rain fell after 3.30 p. m., half an hour before the ceremonies commenced. Precisely at four, the procession which had formed behind the Main Altar, filed into the Sanctuary, after which Pontifical Vespers began. His Lordship Dr. Power occupied the throne, assisted by Very Rev. Archdeacon Forristal as assistant priest, and Revs. Father Ryan and Fitzgerald as deacons. After Vespers the several societies, formed into line and moved down the central aisle in the following order. The five and drum corps of the Total Abstinence Juvenile Society, numbering twenty six, in their handsome uniforms of blue braided with white, and led by Mr. W. F. Keilly. Next came a cross bearer and acolytes attired in white surplices. The orphan girls of St. Michael's Orphanage, numbering seventy, in brown dresses and white veils; the children of St. Peter's School, numbering one hundred in white dresses and veils, with their silk banner, the children of St. Joseph's School, Presentation Convent, numbering sixty in white dresses and veils, with banner, the children of the Mercy Convent School, with banner and in white dresses, veils and crimson sashes. The Total Abstinence Band in green and gold uniform, came next followed by banner and cross, with acolytes, and after them the Sodality of Mary, numbering one hundred, in white dresses, and veils and blue cloaks.

The officers of the following societies in their scarfs, badges and staffs of office came in the following order:—

Star of the Sea, Total Abstinence, Mechanics, Benevolent Irish, Holy Name and the Christian Doctrine. Prof. Bennett's Band came next, and after them Cathedral Altar Boys, Guard of Honor, The Clergy in the following order; Fathers Tierney and Delaney, Fathers O'Brien and Crook; Fathers Lalor and Morris; next came the little flower strawers, with their rustic baskets filled with choicest flowers, reminding one of the lines, "Flowers and children emblems meet, of all things innocent and sweet." Next came the Thruifers followed by the canopy under which the Holy Sacrament was carried by the Most Rev. Dr. Power. Music was discoursed at intervals by the various bands, and never did the "lively fifes and rolling drums," and the brass instruments and sweet clarionettes give forth more inspiring strains than they did yesterday in praise of the Most High. On reaching the main door of the building the joy bells, from the towers above, pealed out their welcome notes; and the vast crowd in the Cathedral yard removed their hats, and kneeling in lowly adoration. The procession moved to the East side of the Church in front of the Presentation Convent, on the steps of which an impromptu altar had been erected. Benediction of the Most Holy Sacrament was held here, the good Sisters of the Presentation Order chanting the Tantum Ergo, which, being heard from the distance, had a most impressive effect, the crowd kneeling as before. The procession again formed in order and encircling the Cathedral grounds stopped before a second altar on the West side of the building. Benediction was again offered here, the chanting been done by the clergy, their strong voices having a grand effect in the open air. After the ceremonies at the altar, the procession moved round to the front of the church and passed in through the main door, up to the centre altar, taking its place in the sanctuary. Benediction was again offered, the choir rendering the O Salutaris Hostia of Loretz, and Grand Tantum Ergo, of Goeb with splendid effect. The blessing from His Lordship concluded the ceremonies, and the vast crowd dispersed to their homes. The congregation was larger than ever before and the best of order prevailed. The long lines of children and young women in white dresses and veils, the honored representatives of the Benevolent and National Societies, the crucifixes, staffs of office and numerous silken banners, the bands, the clergy, the canopy, the Blessed Sacrament, the great Cathedral and statues of St. Patrick, St. John, St. Francis, the Blessed Virgin, the spacious grounds, the music of the instruments and bells, with the vast concourse of devout worshippers, all presented a scene at once grand, solemn and impressive, and such as one would hardly expect to witness outside of the great European centres of Catholicity.

ADDRESS TO REV. M. J. CLARKE, P.P.

To the REV. M. J. CLARKE, P. P., Spiritual Director and Pastor of the Torbay Catholic Total Abstinence and Benefit Society.

REV. AND DEAR FATHER,—

On behalf of the Torbay Catholic Total Abstinence and Benefit Society, we beg leave to offer you our heartfelt greetings on this the occasion of your return from the Eternal City, and from your native Erin, and to tender you at the same time, an expression of the filial esteem and love which influences the hearts of all of us toward you as Founder and Spiritual Director of this noble Society.

During the time you have spent amongst us we have witnessed, with admiration, your devoted and successful labors in the holy cause of temperance; and whilst we admired your works, we were instructed, charmed and edified by your eloquent teaching, and by the bright example of your virtues.

In conclusion we pray, with all the fervor of our souls, that your Reverence may be long spared to discharge, with a zeal and dignity all your own, the manifold duties of your sacred calling, as Pastor of this important Parish of Torbay, and that when, in the fulness of time, your Missionary labors here below shall terminate, you shall be rewarded with a Crown of Eternal Glory in the Realms above.

M. BOLGER, President.
H. EDSTROM, Secretary.

REPLY.

Mr. President and Members of the Torbay Catholic Total Abstinence and Benefit Society:

I thank you very much for your kind reception of me, and for your address of welcome on the occasion of my return to Torbay. Whilst esteeming most highly your cordial greetings, I am specially pleased and gratified with your appreciation of what I have done in advancing in your midst the cause of Total Abstinence. As stated in your beautiful address, your Society is indeed noble. While you observe its rules, you will enjoy great social and domestic happiness, and you will rejoice in a nobility of character that must make you everywhere trusted and respected. It shall always be my duty and my pleasure to encourage the Torbay Total Abstinence Society, of which

I am truly proud to be the founder, and in every way to advance its interests. It is a matter for mutual congratulation that intemperance is very rare in our parish, and I hope and trust that under the influence of religion it will soon disappear altogether and be known no more. Grateful for the kind and generous sentiments you entertain towards me, and for your wishes for my future welfare,

I remain, yours faithfully,

M. J. CLARKE, P.P.

HOME RULE CAMPAIGN.

The people made the most frantic efforts to see the Premier, and broke down the barriers which had been provided to keep them back. A great many men and boys climbed to the top of the railway carriages standing in the station, and from that elevation cheered Mr. Gladstone as he passed them. Mr. Gladstone only reached his coach with the greatest difficulty. A squad of policemen surrounded him, and by much elbowing succeeded at last in getting him through the cheering masses to the cars. The Premier wore a tweed suit and an Inverness cape coat. He bowed and smiled and raised his hat incessantly in response to the greetings of the crowd. At Luton and Bedford crowds of people were at the station, and cheered Mr. Gladstone as he sped by. No stop was made until Leicester was reached. Here there was an enormous gathering which gave the Premier an enthusiastic greeting. A few groans were heard from the outside of the crowd, but these were soon discontinued. A committee presented Mr. Gladstone with an address expressing confidence in him and his Irish scheme, and the Premier made a sharp reply. After thanking the people for their reception he said:—"Time is not allowed me to dwell fully upon the great question before the country, namely, "Will you give Ireland what you gave the colonies with the greatest advantage power to manage not Imperial, but Irish affairs. During my fifty-four years of public life I never saw enthusiasm to equal that which has been in this great cause. The eyes of the world are now upon us in a degree never equalled before. Not only the whole British race, but the whole of civilized mankind have testified the liveliest interest in the question. If, as I have every reason to believe, the verdict is favorable to the people of Ireland, there will be nothing less than the thrill of joy throughout the civilized world. Place before you this noble object—human sympathy combined with justice, and commend it to your deep and deliberate consideration, for you have never had an issue to determine more charged with good or evil to the future advancement of this great Empire." Mr. Gladstone's speech was received with enthusiasm by the multitude. The train arrived at Trent at ten minutes after 1, and another halt was made. Here, as at the other places, there were large crowds, composed not only of the inhabitants of Trent but of people from Nottingham, Ilkstone and every other place near by. Addresses and bouquets were thrust through the window of the Premier's coach, and the enthusiasm of the people was unbounded. Railway employees lined the route for a distance of half a mile. Mr. Gladstone bowed and smiled to the people but did not speak.

A crowd of immense proportions awaited the train at Galashiels. On its arrival Mr. Gladstone was conducted to a platform to receive the following address:—

"As a committee appointed by a crowded meeting of Liberals of Galashiels, which, with only three dissenters, resolved to support the Government and not vote for any candidate who refuses to grant to Ireland a legislature for the management of her domestic affairs, we herewith express our unswerving confidence in you and the Government of which you are so illustrious a head. We trust that God will grant you strength to embody in our legislature the greatest of all Liberal principles—self-government."

THE POLITICAL CRISIS.

CHAMBERLAIN ARRANGES FOR A MEETING—RADICAL UNION TO BE FORMED.

LONDON, June 8.—Mr. Chamberlain has arranged to hold a meeting of his followers to decide whether they shall act with the Hartington committee or as an independent political party. At present Mr. Chamberlain favors the latter course.

The National Liberal Federation has prepared a manifesto to the electors of Great Britain. It adopts home rule as the Liberal party platform in the coming election. The Radical dissidents will organize a Radical union with headquarters in Birmingham. The union's programme will include a large extension of local self government in England, Scotland and Wales and Ireland, coupled with supreme control of all by the Imperial Parliament. Mr.

Chamberlain will be made president, Jesse Collings, secretary, and several members of the present House of Commons vice-presidents.

The conference of Mr. Chamberlain's followers will probably be held on Thursday, and the manifesto will follow.

HOW THE IRISH LEADER DELIVERED HIS SPEECH IN THE COMMONS.

LONDON, June 8.—An eye-witness describes Mr. Parnell upon the floor of the House of Commons last night as follows: He was unusually pale. He commenced his speech nervously. He afterwards followed the lines of his manuscript, which had been previously submitted to and approved by Mr. Sexton. The speech forthwith assumed a higher level, and the orator became very impressive. Every sentence was formed with the greatest accuracy to express certain shades of meaning. Mr. Parnell's face flushed with affection and pride when he exclaimed: "We cannot surrender a single Irishman." The concluding appeal for the peace and prosperity of suffering Ireland was delivered in a chord of genuine kindness different from the great Irish leader's usually cold and dispassionate tone.

Mr. T. M. Healy, member for South Londonderry, just before Mr. Gladstone moved the adjournment of the House this morning, arose in his place and attempted to make a speech. He addressed himself to the Premier, and exclaimed: "I ask you to remember Frederick Douglass' words, that"—Here the uproar drowned Mr. Healy's voice, and the reporters could not catch the remainder of his sentence.

John Bright voted with the opposition. His example was followed by 20 Scotch Liberals.

ENTHUSIASM AMONG THE "LOYALISTS" OF IRELAND.

LONDON, June 8.—There is extensive excitement throughout the whole country over the outcome of the long parliamentary contest. There is the wildest enthusiasm amongst the Loyalists in the north of Ireland. Rockets were sent up at Coleraine, county of Londonderry, last night, announcing the result of the vote to the adjacent towns, and soon the news was known throughout Ulster. Ten thousand Loyalists paraded at Lurgan this morning in honor of their victory.

TO PROPAGATE HOME RULE.

LONDON, June 8.—A meeting of 40 Scotch peers and members of the House of Commons was held to-day. Lord Roseberry presided. A committee was appointed to propagate the Irish home rule doctrine in Scotch constituencies. Measures were adopted for the establishment of home rule literature and speakers' funds.

ULTIMATE VICTORY SURE.

LINCOLN, Neb., June 8.—President Egan of the Irish National League of America to-day received the following cable on the subject of the defeat of the home rule bill:

LONDON, June 8.

To Patrick Egan: The democracy will reverse the decision of Parliament; council friends to have patience and confidence in certain victory; the national cause cannot be defeated if the Irish people the world over keep down passion and calmly and determinedly persevere in our present line.

LIBERAL VICTORY PROMISED.

NEW YORK, June 9.—The "Evening Telegram" publishes the following special to-day from London:

The approaching general election will probably involve a greater amount of expense than any that has occurred since bribery was abolished. Most of the increased expenditure will fall upon the Tories. Their offer to pay the election expenses of the Liberals who voted against the home rule bill will cause a large drain upon their treasury and there are many constituencies which they propose to contest which were not contested last year. The Ulster Tories, for instance, propose to contest every seat in Ulster in an effort to show that Ulster is not divided. The ordinary expenses of the campaign will also be largely increased. Election committees of both parties are preparing to send out more speakers and more literary matter than ever before, involving largely increased expenditure.

GLADSTONE'S MANIFESTO TO THE ELECTORS OF MIDLOTHIAN.

Mr. Gladstone, after the dissolution of Parliament, issued the following manifesto to the electors of Midlothian: Gentlemen—"In consequence of the defeat of a bill for the better government of Ireland, the ministry advised and her Majesty was pleased to sanction the dissolution of parliament for the decision by the nation for the gravest and likewise the simplest issue submitted to it for half a century. It is only the sense of the gravity of this issue which induces me, when nature cries to seek, after sitting in this, a seat in the fourteenth, and with this view to solicit for the fifth time the honor of your confidence. At the last election I endeavored in my addresses and speeches to impress upon the fact that a great crisis had arrived, in the affairs of Ireland. Weak as the late government was for ordinary purposes, it had a great advantage for dealing with that crisis. Comprehensive measures proceeding from that government would have received warm and extensive support from within the liberal party, and would probably have closed the Irish controversy within the present session, and have left the parliament of 1885 free to prosecute the now stagnant work of ordinary legislation, with the multitude of questions it includes. My earnest hope was to support the late cabinet in such a course of policy. On the 26th of last January the opposite policy of coercion was declared to have been the choice of the government, the Earl of Carnarvon alone refusing to share in it. The Irish question was thus placed in the fore-ground to the exclusion of every other. The hour, as all felt, was come—the only point remaining to determine was the manner in which it was to be dealt with. In my judgment the proposal of coercion was not justified by the facts and was doomed to a certain and disgraceful failure: Some method of governing Ireland other than coercion ought, as I thought, to be sought for and to be found. I therefore viewed with regret the fall of the late cabinet, and when summoned by her majesty to form a new one, I undertook it on a basis of anti-coercion policy with the fullest explanations to those whose aid I sought as colleagues, when I proposed to grant Ireland a domestic legislature and maintain the honor and consolidate the unity of the empire. The government was formed and the work was at once put in hand. You will now understand how and why it is that the affairs of Ireland, and not for the first time, have thrust aside every other subject and adjourned our hopes of useful and progressive legislation. Thus, gentlemen, it is that this great and simple issue has come upon you and demands your decision. Will you govern Ireland by coercion, or will you let Ireland manage her own affairs? There are two clear positive, and intelligible plans before the world,—the plan of the government and the plan of Lord Salisbury. Our plan is that Ireland should, under well considered conditions transact her own affairs. His plan is to ask parliament to renew the repressive laws and enforce them resolutely for twenty years, by the end of which time he assures us Ireland will be fit to accept any government in the way of a local government, on the repeal of coercion laws, you may wish to give her.

Among the benefits I anticipate from your acceptance of our policy, are these: Consolidation of an united empire and a great addition to its strength, stoppage of heavy, constant, and demoralising waste of public treasury, abatement and gradual extinction of ignoble feuds in Ireland and that development of her resources which experience shows to be the natural consequences of free and orderly government, the redemption of the honor of Great Britain from the stigma fastened upon her from time immemorial in respect to Ireland, by the judgment of the whole civilized world, and lastly the restoration of Parliament to its dignity and efficiency, and the regular progress of the business of the country. Well, gentlemen, the first question I now put to you is how shall Ireland be governed? There is another question behind it and another involved in it: How are England and Scotland to be governed? You know how, for the last six years especially, the affairs of England and Scotland have been impeded and your Imperial parliament discredited and disabled. All this happened while the Nationalists were but a small minority of Irish members, without support from so much as a handful of members not Irish. Now they approach ninety and are entitled to say, "We are speaking the views of the Irish nation." It is impossible to deal with this subject by half measures. They are strong in their numbers: strong in British support, which brought 313 members to vote for their country; strongest of all in the sense of being right. But, gentlemen, we have done our part, the rest remains for you. Electors of the country, may you be enabled to see through and cast away all delusions. Refuse evil and choose good. I have the honor to be, gentlemen, your faithful and grateful servant.

W. E. GLADSTONE.
